Creating an Inventory (Personal Property)

Creating an inventory of your personal belongings is one of the most important components of preparing to file a claim after a disaster occurs. This will make completing the claim process with your insurance company, easier, faster and you are less likely to leave out important items. Doing your inventory before a disaster strikes, prepares you to confirm what survived a disaster and what was lost.

The best way to manage your home inventory is using the inventory guide in this handbook. To help, you may use a spreadsheet or even write things on a notepad. For the future, your inventory should be kept in a secure location outside of the home, or in a fire/water proof safe. Very often people get their kids involved in the process when creating an inventory. Children feel involved in the recovery if you make it more like a game, they will enjoy documenting and taking photos of all the things around their house. For the future, your children will feel more secure knowing that all their toys, clothes and all the things they love are going to be able to be saved or replaced after disaster. For items that are too damaged, they will want to go along for the shopping trip to replace damaged or lost items with something NEW!

Go room-by-room if this is possible and record all of your items into the inventory. If your home is too damaged, you can sit and go room by room in your mind, either alone or as a family. Using the inventory list in this handbook, you will recall many more items, from trash baskets to drapery rods that you might have otherwise missed.

In the spreadsheet example on the next page, there are links to photos of each item. The first photo link would bring up a photo of the item in the home. The next column would bring up a photo taken in a store, or a photo of a computer screen showing the same item for sale on the Internet. This spreadsheet was created after a devastating electrical fire, to prove actual losses when the insurance company demanded details, even beyond the requirements of the policy.

You will need to create your own interactive inventory either in a spreadsheet or on paper using the guide of this handbook. Using the list in this book will help you after you have already lost your home to recover the most you can, by not leaving out any items that can be overlooked. Remember that you have to calculate the taxes you paid for the items you list and add that in! Otherwise, when you replace an item, you will end up paying the tax again out-of-pocket instead of having it covered by your insurance carrier.

In this workbook, you and your family will easily organize your inventory and if you have photos, they will help you recall the details of your personal property.

It is now time to price the items. The Internet has made pricing of most items easy; time consuming, but easy. There are various web sites where you can price items and compare prices on various retail sites at once. If you do not have Internet access, you may walk through stores and get an idea of the retail value of the items you have lost and need to replace.

A good home inventory includes a detailed list of your possessions including receipts, descriptions and photos of your home's contents.

It will take a little time to compile, but it will be worth every moment when you are able to have a more detailed list for your insurance carrier.

In the future, remember to update your inventory when you make new purchases.

When it comes to a home inventory, a picture truly is worth a thousand words.

For Your Home Inventory

If possible, record purchase dates and serial numbers of small appliances and the following theft-prone items:

- Guns
- Electrical Appliances
- Lawn mowers
- Power tools
- Sewing machines
- Vacuum cleaners
- Computers
- Digital cameras
- DVD players
- Electronic equipment
- Fax machine
- Printers
- Scanners
- Stereos and MP3 players
- Televisions

Along with the description of each item, attach its receipt, if possible. If you're making an audio or video inventory, start in one corner of the room and work your way around until the whole room has been covered.

Don't forget closets, attic, garage and basement.

On antiques, art, jewelry, collectibles, and certain other items, appraisals are important. Always include the name and address of the appraiser.

For other items, take photos or video:

- Antiques
- Art objects
- Clocks
- Collectibles
- Figurines
- Furs
- Jewelry
- Paintings
- Silver
- CDs and DVDs
- Video cameras
- Musical instruments
- Photography equipment
- Sports equipment

✓ TIP

For Home Inventory Photos

- Use any color camera with a flash, your home video camera, or a digital camera.
- Label photos and videotapes with the dates they were taken. If appropriate, record the date of purchase, brand name and purchase price of each item on the record next to the picture.
- If you have a film camera, have your developer save the images to a disk. You can store the print copies with a copy of your inventory.
- If you have a digital camera, save the images to a disk or burn a CD.
- To get an overall picture, take wide-angle shots of the whole room, then take several close-ups to capture detail. Start in one corner of the room and work your way around.
- Focus your flash away from mirrors and other reflective surfaces by standing at a 45-degree angle to the shiny surface.
- When using a flash, try not to get closer than the recommended focus range. If you must get closer, dim the flash by placing a white handkerchief over the flash while taking the picture.
- Open glass doors to prevent reflection.
- A family member in the picture helps substantiate ownership.

- Open closet doors to show quantity of clothing.
- Take pictures of the insides of drawers with the contents fanned out.
- Use a non-glare dark cloth as a background for silver, china or jewelry.
- When photographing china, take a picture of the pattern name or manufacturer's signature, along with a picture of the pattern.
- When photographing jewelry, angle the flash to avoid glare.
- When photographing or recording collections in albums, make sure the picture includes the entire page, along with close-up shots of the most valuable items. Make sure the pictures tie in with your home in some way.
- Photograph your power tools, including detailed photos of the inside of your toolbox.
- If you want to take only a few pictures, either take pictures of groups of your most valuable unappraised items, or record whole rooms with your most valuable and theft-prone items prominently displayed.

Use the Inventory Checklist is at the end of the book to track the items in your home and add to it when items are not listed.

BONUS

Home Inventory Checklist

The following pages contain over two thousand suggestions for items you may have in your home. Certainly there are many more items that are specialized and may not be included. The following are only suggestions. You must create a list that accurately reflects your own home and personal property. Insurance fraud is a crime: that includes fraud by someone filing a claim, but it is also a crime when your insurance carrier commits fraud against you. Creating an inventory before disaster strikes will help mitigate any fraud accusation on either side.

If you are completing this inventory after a loss, place a check mark next to items you had in your home at the time of the loss, assign a reasonable replacement value and note if there may be a photo showing the item:

✓ TIP

From this list, create estimated totals of what it would cost to get your life back after a total loss. Remember too that if the value of your belongings is less than your coverage, you may ALSO be entitled to a personal shopper to go search for replacing the items you have lost.

For example: If you have coverage for $200,000 in personal property, but you only have $150,000 worth of items, you still have up to $50,000 to hire a person to replace your lost items (so that you do not have to lose time from work or taking care of your children). Ask your licensed Public Adjustor.

TERMS

Description: Keep the description simple but informative, i.e. Model # xxxxxx and/or list the brand name, i.e.. e., Polo, Liz Claiborne, Black and Decker, Sears, etc. Brand names, model numbers help confirm the value of an item.

Quantity: Group items when you can. Indicate the cost per individual item not the total in one column. Give a separate column that will reflect the total cost of the items. Example: 5 items in column C x the individual item cost in column D ($11.00) = the total in column D ($55.00). If you have ties that range from $25.00 to $50.00 don't lump them together. Separate the $25.00 ties from the $50.00 and list the two groups of ties separately. If you have 50 paperback books that have an average price of $7.99 then group the paperback books. Keep similar items of the same price in groups to quicken the inventory process and to avoid a 300 page document when possible.

Cost/ Per: Cost per item: = RCV: Replacement Cost Value: The cost of the item listed in column A should reflect the cost to replace a particular item with one that is similar or: Like Kind and Quality. Keep in mind that the market is being flooded with items of lesser quality and lower prices. With so many items being made at lower costs and lesser quality it is also important at times to distinguish the country of manufacture. A can opener made in china in 2004 for $14.99 may not be of the same quality as a can opener made in America or Germany in 1978. You are entitled to be compensated for the quality of the item damaged. Do not accept the value of something that is not of like and kind to what you owned.

AGE: Indicate age in years; i.e.. e., 1, 5, 20. Try to avoid this, as it is often a trick to devalue your items. If you must put an age down, do so. If an Item is new and still packaged or recently purchased indicate "New" in description column.

AMT: Amount of depreciation: Depreciation is the value that is loss to an item due to wear and tear (use) and age. There are no set rules when it comes to applying to depreciation to a particular item because every items has a different useful life. Clothing will depreciate faster than furniture. Furniture used a lot will depreciate faster. A well made bedroom dresser can last for hundreds of years if taken care of properly but may last a year if water marks, cigarettes burns or excessive sun exposure are allowed to damage the surfaces. Baseball cards may appreciate as well as a fine painting or other works of art. A silver stamp holder that you purchased used 5 years ago for $15.00 may have increased in value or depreciated in value. Each item or group of items must be treated separately from household to household.

RCV: Replacement Cost Value: This figure represents the value of the quantity of items listed in column C X times the cost per item in column D. (See Cost per Item above)

Dep Amount: (Amount of depreciation applied) A good way to understand the concept of depreciation is to focus on a car. A brand new car may sell for $23,000.00. The same car a year older may only sell for $20,000.00 and the same auto two years older may only sell for $16,000.00.

ACV: Actual Cash Value: Simply put, the actual cash value of an item is: the present day value of a used item. The Replacement Cost Value (RCV) of an item minus the Depreciation (Dep) (based on wear and tear and/or age) equals the Actual Cash Value (ACV) of an item. (RCV – Dep = ACV)
